

Merzouga | Janko Hanushevsky & Eva Pöpplein

Merzouga is a spot in the Sahara where Cologne-based computer-musician Eva Pöpplein and electric-bassist/author Janko Hanushevsky encountered the roaring silence of camel-flies and sand trickling down the dunes. Led by an abiding curiosity they traveled to India, Lao, Cambodia, Vietnam, Morocco, Ukraine, Brazil, and Greenland, where they made extensive field-recordings and sound-research. Since 2002 they have been working together as a duo, producing radio-drama, ars acustica sound-compositions, and radio-features, performing and composing music for radio, film and theater. Their radio-works often combine field-recordings, literature and music in one musical, compositional gesture. They have won several international awards, and have repeatedly been awarded “Hörspiel des Monats” by Deutsche Akademie der Darstellenden Künste. Commissions for major German broadcasters, such as Deutschlandfunk Kultur, Deutschlandfunk, WDR, HR, RBB, NDR, ZDF/arte, and Finnish broadcaster YLE. Broadcasts by all German ARD-broadcasters, ORF (Austria), SRF (Switzerland) RTÉ Nova (Ireland), and YLEISRADIO (Finland). Their critically acclaimed sound compositions “Mekong Morning Glory” (DKultur 2009) and “52°46’ North 13°29’ East – Music for Wax-Cylinders” were released on CD by the GRUENREKORDER label. Their music has been represented on various compilations, a.o. the GRUENREKORDER 100, Noise of Cologne and on the renowned WIRE TAPPER.
